Quick Quiz

WHAT?

Women's movement and the UN

From the very founding of the United Nations in 1945, the women's movements for peace and democracy strongly supported the UN charter and Declaration of Human rights. We pushed for --and succeeded --to create the UN Commission on the Status of Women (1946). Our demands resulted in the UN women's conferences held in Mexico (1975), Copenhagen (1980), Nairobi (1985) And Beijing (1995). We were the movers and shakers that created UN Women in 1990, UN Security Council resolution #1325 and human rights bodies.

In 2020 during Beijing + 25 and UN 75, let us celebrate these achievements and the extraordinary power of the feminist and women's movements to ensure that the UN works for equality, sustainable development and peace for all, leaving no one behind. But let us also work towards a transformative framework, a feminist and women's movement action plan and coalitions to address the crises of our times such as climate change, illiberal democracies and the persistent discrimination and violence against women.

WHY?

The feminist and women's movements can use Beijing + 25 to advance a Feminist and Women's Movement Action Plan

We must leverage the power of global consensus and binding legal obligations for accountability:

- Beijing Platform for Action
- Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) and other human rights treaties
 - The sustainable development goals (SDGS)

We can break down silos, build a transformative framework and build new alliances and solidarity as well as develop an action plan and feminist action coalitions
